Metallic Minerals announced that its third alluvial gold royalty operation is now ramping up, marking the second active operation at Australia Creek in the Klondike Gold District, Yukon. The update highlights continued progress in building a broader royalty base around the company's Klondike interests.

Investment thesis

- A third operating royalty source improves portfolio depth and long-term optionality.
- A second active operation at Australia Creek shows continued momentum in the Klondike royalty business.
- Royalty exposure can complement Metallic Minerals' broader exploration and development asset base.
- Key watch items remain production scale, timing and eventual royalty cash-flow contribution.

Quick LuxMetals take

This is a constructive operational update. While the release does not include detailed production figures, it confirms continued expansion of Metallic Minerals' Klondike royalty platform and adds another potential source of future recurring royalty income.
